Heads up. My article has been trending and today I just heard from four people who are currently at my old apartment and all of them have had some unexplained medical issues while living there — one of them severe like me.

Two are Apple employees. At least one went through AC Wellness but no one could figure out what's wrong with them.

I sent Dr. [REDACTED] a note about it just now — but heads up for you too. You might want to start screening local folks who have otherwise unexplained rashes, dizziness, throat/nose/allergy issues, trouble sleeping, trouble breathing, etc (VOC exposure symptoms) — by asking, where do you live?

The apartments in question are the Santa Clara Square Apartments in Santa Clara city.

Understood there's probably liability issues with even asking or putting the idea in their head without any formal statements out about it yet — but we have fancy lawyers, so maybe they can help figure it out.

Thank you both! Btw, I just signed up for the ACW Health Data Sharing live on. ;)

P.S. probably actually a good thing the req for me on your team fell through last year, [REDACTED] I clearly wouldn't have been much help to you while I was dealing with all that.

Hope you're both well!

Hi! I hope you both are well.

FYI - an article was published about what happened to me last year:
<https://sfbayview.com/2021/03/i-thought-i-was-dying-my-apartment-was-built-on-toxic-waste/>

Even included the striking Apple Health data (resting heart rate chart). :)

P.S. Biz conduct approved as long as I didn't publicly identify as an Apple employee.

[REDACTED] is a heads up about this. Can you help schedule 1/2 hour with [REDACTED] and Ashely when we come back from winter break? Ashley had some recent experiences with ACW that she'd like to [REDACTED] through to provide some feedback on things we may be able to improve.

Thanks in advance,
